Themed around the sunrise, this spectacular beachfront condo is a dream come true for one couple in Sunny Isles

A Dedon's dining ensemble and an intimate social grouping rom Clima Home.

A ray of burnt orange velvet wraps a pair of Minotti armchairs. Sofas in a textured ecru face off across cocktail tables from Arravanti. Eero Saarinen's "Tulip" table from Knoll corners the space in classic style.

Snaidero's cabinetry — all with hidden hardware to enhance the sleek contemporary look of the kitchen. "Soleil Grande" pendants from The Lighting Studio pose a modern take in smoked glass. In perfect juxtaposition, Addison House side chairs tuck beneath the marble island table.

Terzani's cylindrical "Frame" pendants nurture a coral motif of mesh within a glass display. The dining table can seat a party of 14 comfortably in Potocco's leather-clad "Blossom" chairs from Sklar.

All about spa-like relaxation, as well as enjoyment of the Atlantic Ocean, the master suite presents a private sanctuary. Walls of glass invite natural light in to rejuvenate body, mind and spirit.

“Glo” pendants light a vanity just for “her” in the master bath. Perched to overlook the ocean, Victoria + Albert’s “Barcelona” tub from Farrey’s is backed by Marble of the World’s “Mystery White” stone polished to a high sheen.

The “Marlow” chaise joins an upholstered platform bed, both from Arravanti, to enjoy a bird’s eye view from the master bedroom’s bay of glass. Horchow’s bamboo-and-silk area rug anchors the space in ocean hues.

“By truly listening to our clients and empathizing with them, we create unique and timeless interiors that reflect our clients’ personality and showcase our versatility in design.”

Floating between the sea and sky with the focus on the horizon, colors throughout this Sunny Isles condo shimmer with an ethereal silvery blue that underlies both worlds. “Even so, think sunrise,” interior designer Ivonne Ronderos says. “The concept was the horizon, highlighting the sunrise in the main living areas with colors that cover a range of serene taupes to a striking dash of burnt orange. As we move through the day and into the private spaces, it’s all about the blues.”

The concept came from the husband. “He kept talking about his dream to see the horizon on the oceanfront every morning, which is why we created a casual eating area in the corner of the living area where he could have his breakfast,” the designer says. For the wife, she knew their move signaled a new time in their lives, and she wanted their new condo to be welcoming to their three grown daughters. “She didn’t want a super contemporary style, because it wouldn’t feel like home,” Ronderos says. “She went with splashes of orange to add the warmth.”

Elements of antiqued brass, gold, chrome and even brushed gunmetal continue the homey feel throughout. “We like mixing different metals,” Ronderos says. “You don’t have to pick a metal finish and stick to it; you can mix and match, just like jewelry.”

Shimmer and shine reappear in the kitchen, where the original white upper cabinetry integrates beautifully with the new dark wood bases. “We pulled the book-matched marble backsplash forward to accommodate LED lighting, and we also topped the breakfast island with marble in complement to the compact stone counters,” Ronderos says.

When entertaining, a custom ash-toned, bleached-oak sliding wall panel closes off the kitchen from the dining area and wraps around to a lighted design feature of tinted glass in the living area. Reflections bounce between a lacquered-topped dining table and the drop ceiling above styled in Bellagio’s high-gloss vinyl. Another custom feature, the glass-topped, lacquered buffet was especially tailored to fit the space.

Panoramic ocean views wrap the master suite, where the bed appears to float center stage strategically facing a wall of glass that frames vistas in three directions. An oasis of tranquility, the marble-clad master bath was reconfigured to position the deep-soak tub and walk-in shower to overlook the ocean as well.

While the couple was anxious that their condo would not feel like home, in the end, the design team achieved their goals with the right mix of cool silvery shimmer and vibrant splashes of warmth. “This is ‘their place,’ perfectly suited for a new life on the horizon,” Ronderos says.
